Ephriam George Stark

AMY CARROLL STARK

Amy, the youngest of the 14 children of Charles Negus and Kezia Giles Carroll, was born Decembr 30, 1882, in Orderville, Utah. Living on a farm a mile from town, she walked to school from the day she started until graduation, except, of course, in the most inclement weaher. Pioneer conditions were improving, and while there were sacrifices, there also were comforts and opportunities.

She attended high school at Branch Normal in Cedar City, which was then a subsidiary of the University of Utah. After graduation she taught school four years in her home town. She began her Church activities early in life, as treasurer of the Primary and teacher of the first kindergarten organized in the ward Sunday school. She also served many years as a teacher of teenagers in the same organization.

She was twice president of the YLMIA, serving eight years in all. For two years she was Kanab stake president of that organization. She served twice for several years on the Kanab Stake Relief Society Board, first as teacher of visiting teachers then later as literary class leader.

She was married in the St. George Temple on October 13, 1915, to Ephraim George Stark, a convert to the LDS gospel from Portsmouth, England. To them were born two children, Kezia Ann and Warden George Stark, Kezia living in Fredonia, Arizona, and Marden in Modesto, California. They each have four children, and both families are diligent workers in the Church and communities in which they lve.

Aside from her teaching activities, Amy has written perhaps more than other person in Orderville, for public occasions, such as pageants, tributes for funerals, orations for patriotic occasions, essays and poetry for local literary productions, valedictory addresses, and topic and lesson material for the many who are constantly coming to her for help. She and her sister Emma have been responsible for the historical and genealogical material of the Carroll and Giles families.

510

AMY CARROLL STARK

HEBER BIOGRAPHIES

Amy, the youngest of the 14 children of Charles Negus and Kezia Giles Carroll, was born Decembr 30, 1882, in Orderville, Utah. Living on a farm a mile from town, she walked to school from the day she started until graduation, except, of course, in the most inclement weaher. Pioneer conditions were improving, and while there were sacrifices, there also were comforts and opportunities.

She attended high school at Branch Normal in Cedar City, which was then a subsidiary of the University of Utah. After graduation she taught school four years in her home town. She began her Church activities early in life, as treasurer of the Primary and teacher of the first kindergarten organized in the ward Sunday school. She also served many years as a teacher of teenagers in the same organization.

She was twice president of the YLMIA, serving eight years in all. For two years she was Kanab stake president of that organization. She served twice for several years on the Kanab Stake Relief Society Board, first as teacher of visiting teachers then later as literary class leader.

She was married in the St. George Temple on October 13, 1915, to Ephraim George Stark, a convert to the LDS gospel from Portsmouth, England. To them were born two children, Kezia Ann and Warden George Stark, Kezia living in Fredonia, Arizona, and Marden in Modesto, California. They each have four children, and both families are diligent workers in the Church and communities in which they lve.

Aside from her teaching activities, Amy has written perhaps more than other person in Orderville, for public occasions, such as pageants, tributes for funerals, orations for patriotic occasions, essays and poetry for local literary productions, valedictory addresses, and topic and lesson material for the many who are constantly coming to her for help. She and her sister Emma have been responsible for the historical and genealogical material of the Carroll and Giles families.

510

511

AMY CARROLL STARK

Amy, the youngest of the 14 children of Charles Negus and Kezia Giles Carroll, was born Decembr 30, 1882, in Orderville, Utah. Living on a farm a mile from town, she walked to school from the day she started until graduation, except, of course, in the most inclement weaher. Pioneer conditions were improving, and while there were sacrifices, there also were comforts and opportunities.

She attended high school at Branch Normal in Cedar City, which was then a subsidiary of the University of Utah. After graduation she taught school four years in her home town. She began her Church activities early in life, as treasurer of the Primary and teacher of the first kindergarten organized in the ward Sunday school. She also served many years as a teacher of teenagers in the same organization.

She was twice president of the YLMIA, serving eight years in all. For two years she was Kanab stake president of that organization. She served twice for several years on the Kanab Stake Relief Society Board, first as teacher of visiting teachers then later as literary class leader.

She was married in the St. George Temple on October 13, 1915, to Ephraim George Stark, a convert to the LDS gospel from Portsmouth, England. To them were born two children, Kezia Ann and Warden George Stark, Kezia living in Fredonia, Arizona, and Marden in Modesto, California. They each have four children, and both families are diligent workers in the Church and communities in which they lve.

Aside from her teaching activities, Amy has written perhaps more than other person in Orderville, for public occasions, such as pageants, tributes for funerals, orations for patriotic occasions, essays and poetry for local literary productions, valedictory addresses, and topic and lesson material for the many who are constantly coming to her for help. She and her sister Emma have been responsible for the historical and genealogical material of the Carroll and Giles families.